The number of passengers in April slightly higher than a year ago

04.07.2018

In April 2018, 25.1 million passengers used railway transport services. The number of passengers was higher by 0.04% compared to April last year. This is the first month with results higher than last year.

Transport performance in April amounted to 1.6 billion pass-km, while operational performance was 13.3 million train-kilometers. The transport performance was lower by 0.7%, while the operational performance was higher by 1.9%. The average distance traveled by one passenger amounted to nearly 65 km.

After the first three months of decline in passenger numbers, April's results outpaced those from April in the previous year. The total results for the last four months are nearly 3.5% lower in the case of the number of passengers and more than 1% lower in the case of transport performance in relation to the same period last year. Operational performance was higher by over 2%.
Detailed data are available here.